The Progressive magazine is seeking an archival intern for the Summer Semester to read, study and organize the magazine’s digital archives for publishing on our website.

We’re a small team that has published a nationally-read magazine since 1909. Our archives include content beginning in 1920 with eclectic and impressive interviews, stories, investigative reports and political commentary reflective of the time.

Archival Interns will work on a team with our Online Media Editor, and Social Media Intern to identify archival content worth republishing on our website and on social media platforms.

Applicants should have a passion for progressive politics, keen curiosity in, and knowledge of American political history. Applicants must also be strong researchers with good organizational habits. Ideal candidates will see and understand how historical content enriches understanding of current political events.

Useful Skills:

- Social Media literacy
- Familiarity with alternative media
- Experience working with online content management systems like Drupal, wordpress
- Google docs
- Ability to navigate online databases and organize content found in them
- Excellent reading comprehension and critical thinking skills

The Progressive is dedicated to providing internships that meet the qualifications for earning academic credit. If hired, staff will help interns apply and complete requirements to earn J697 internship credit or your college’s equivalent course. Interns at The Progressive also earn a $500 semesterly stipend.

To apply, please email a cover letter and resumé titled ‘last name, first name - document name’ to Lizzie Kunze at elizabeth@progressive.org. Writing samples submitted with cover letter and resumé are preferred, but not required.
