The Progressive Magazine - Development Internship

The Progressive is a national monthly magazine of investigative reporting, political commentary, cultural coverage, activism, interviews, poetry, and humor. It champions peace, social and economic justice, civil rights, civil liberties, human rights, a preserved environment, and a reinvigorated democracy. Its bedrock values are non-violence and freedom of speech.

As a 501(c)3 non-profit organization, The Progressive relies upon the generosity of readers and like-minded funders.

Development Interns will assist the Development Director in the acquisition of contributions, grants, planned giving, and major gifts. They will learn the basics of Nonprofit Development work such as database management, donor research, grant & proposal writing, donor cultivation, direct mail, and the creation in execution of an annual campaign. They will be crucial to the business department in creating mechanisms and messages that continue to promote the reputation of The Progressive across the nation.

Applicants should be organized and outgoing. They should have a passion for progressive values, independent media, and fundraising to make a difference. Past fundraising experience not necessary, although helpful.

The Progressive is dedicated to providing internships that meet the qualifications for earning academic credit. If hired, staff will help interns apply and complete requirements to earn J697 internship credit or your college’s equivalent course. Interns at The Progressive are also given a $500 semesterly stipend.
