A World Turned Upside Down

At time I flew from New York to Johannesburg. I ended up in my airplane reading The Economist. It turned out to be a banana issue on the world economy as the 21st century. We were creating more than $trillion in annual wealth, but the wealth was not to the advantage of all nations. European, Japanese, and American capitalists, as well as Chinese, had 95 percent of the world's captain. In that sense, a world that has yet to take
